TO INTRODUCE FLAX GROWING.

County Agent C. M. Merritt authorizes us to announce a series of four meetings next week for the purpose of discussing with interested farmers
a plan to experiment with the growing of flax as a money crop in Medina County next year. He asks that farmers come out to these meetings to study the possibilities of this crop and lay plans for securing the necessary quantity of seed for planting
whatever acreage that may be decided upon.

The meetings will be held at 8 P.
M. as follows:

Tuesday, October 11th, at Riomedina school house.

Wednesday, October 12th, at La-
Coste public school auditorium.

Thursday, October 13th, at Devine courthouse.

Friday, October 14th, at D'Hanis
public school building.

Any interested party will be welcome at any of these meetings.

Owls Outplayed by Panthers

The Hondo Owl's second game of the season brought defeat to the Owls, being issued by the Texas Military Institute Panthers of San Antonio. The Hondo group showed improvement over the game with Crystal City, but were still not able to make the grade against the Panthers. Grell's passing showed very much improvement, but for some reason the receivers were not able to hold on to Grell's passes, which had an appearance not unlike that of a bullet. Captain Fred Bader of the Owls played his best game to date, and along with Henry Schuehle was in on practically every play. Schuehle and Bader tying for most tackles. Leinweber showed his stuff with his kicking for the Owl squad. His punts averaged forty-four yards and with one quick-kick for sixty-seven yards. The T. M. I. team received eleven first downs, whereas Hondo only received two first downs. Hondo's pass defense and blocking showed need of improvement.

As the game started, Bader kicked off to T. M. I., the ball being returned to T. M. I.'s 34 yard line. After three plays the Panthers had advanced the ball to their 47 yard line for a first down. After two more plays, T. M. I. was penalized back to their 35 yard line. The ball was then punted over the goal line and Hondo received the pigskin on their 20 yard line. After two plays Leinweber punted from Hondo's 23 yard line to the Panther's 40 yard line. The ball was returned to the Panthers 47 where Schuehle stopped the carrier. The Panthers next three plays were to no avail and the ball was punted to Hondo's 1/2 yard line, where it rolled out of bounds. Leinweber kicked back to Hondo's 38 yard line. After two plays the Panthers received another first down and repeated this after three more downs. The ball now rested on Hondo's 15 yard line with first down for the Panthers. An off-tackle play advanced the Panthers to Hondo's 8 yard line where Bader and Finger kept the ball from further advancement. On the last down the Panthers attempted a pass which was incomplete, the ball going to Hondo on the 20 yard line. Hondo failed to gain yardage on the next three plays and Leinweber kicked from Hondo's 20 yard line to the Panthers 40 yard line. T. M. I.'s next three downs brought them no yardage and the ball was kicked to Hondo's nineteen yard line. This marked the end of the first quarter with the score remaining 0-0.

Going into the second quarter with Hondo in possession of the ball. The first two plays failed to click and Leinweber kicked from Hondo's 24 to T. M. I.'s 24 yard line. T. M. I.'s next series of downs, a left end run was stopped by Bader and a pass was knocked down by Rucker, center of the Hondo team; the Panthers then kicked to Hondo's 35 yard line. On the first down Leinweber quick kicked from Hondo's 35 yard line to the Panthers 2 yard line, a total distance of sixty-three yards. T. M. I. returned the ball by kicking to Hondo's 35 yard line. Grell then attempted two passes to Leinweber and Finger, respectively, both being incomplete. Leinweber got off another good kick from Hondo's 35 yard line to the T. M. I.'s 2 yard line, where it rolled out of bounds. The Panthers then kicked from their 2 yard line to their 30 yard line. In the next series of downs the Owls took to the air with the pigskin. On the first down Grell faked a lateral to Finger, Finger advancing to the 38 yard line. The next three passes failed to make good and the ball went over to the ball, another first down was recorded and the ball went over to the Hondo squad after a kick. On the first down, with Hondo in possession of the ball on their 20 yard line, Finger went around left end from Hondo's 20 to the 38 yard line for a first down. After two more plays Hondo was penalized for holding and after another play, the ball was kicked to T. M. I.'s 35 yard line. The Panthers gained no yardage on their next series of downs, with Bader and Schuehle breaking up their plays. Hondo tried a series of three passes with Grell sending them out and Finger and Schuehle doing the receiving for a first down. The next three passes were incomplete and Leinweber kicked over the goal line with the ball being returned to T. M. I.'s 20 yard line. With T. M. I. in possession of the ball they received another first down and then advanced to the T. M. I. 48 yard line when the pistol sounded, thus ending the game with a final score of 6-0, in favor of the T. M. I. Panthers.

GRUDGE BATTLE TO BE PLAYED HERE.

One of the biggest grudge battles of the year will be decided next Friday night when the Hondo Owls meet the Del Rio Wildcats on Barry Field. Game time will be 8 P. M. The game promises to be one of the hardest fought of the season and has many thrills in store for the fans. However, this tilt will be a non-conference game.

The Wildcats will probably try to submerge that 21 to 7 licking they received last year from the Owls. The Wildcats should have a strong team, despite their early season downfall. The Owls are improving rapidly and should be ready for the invading Wildcats. With a loss and a tie their season record, the Owls are out to hang a win to their column.

Come out and support the Owls and show them your fight and loyalty.

UNDER THE FLOODLIGHTS

Friday night was date night at Barry Field. Maybe it was the factitious moonlight or the balmy South breeze that brought out the beaux and belles and again MAYBE it was football. No matter the reason, there they were: GWEN GRAY and ALBERT HAEGELIN, with Gwen looking angelic under a brigande sort of black hat swathed in blue chiffon. FLORENCE ZUBERBUER and cousin GERTRUDE ZUBERBUER of Comstock shaking hands in a gentlemen's agreement . . . with HENRY STIEGLER and CHARLES SCHMIDT the gentlemen who probably had to do the agreeing with the ladies . . . the gal in a Sonja Henie-looking white costume saving, "I'm SUSIE MUENKIN", to a likely looking lad. . . likely to ask her for a date!

The Messrs. and Mesdames can give the "small fry" a run for their money any day. . . H. B. HUBERT glimpsed patting his wife LILLIAN's hand while he thought no one was looking. . . the HERMAN COUSERS with the Professor getting pointers from the game to take home to his six-man team at D'Hanis. . . MONROE and MRS. LANGFORD, with WANDA MAE dividing her attention between a candy bar and her dog. . . HENRY and LAURA WINDROW, both of 'em lolling in new-fangled bleacher chairs and the envy of all the pillow-pressers.

There were lots of SHORTS among those present, but the shortest thing we saw was WALTER CASE'S cigar at the end of the game.

The Pearsall power-house known as No. 19 on the T. M. I. squad and probably as "Fatty" to his friends was dubbed TOAR by Hondo serial-seers. . . and the subject of some gentle ribbing. . . "Toar is going in for T. M. I. Did they take out one man. No they took out two." . . "They are spreading out the wagon sheet; they must be going to take Fatty out of the game" . . . and all the time, MONROE RUCKER says, "He's the poliest thing . . . always says 'I'm sorry' when—and how—he hits you".

The telephone newly installed in the press box proving a bonanza for Carle's Confectionery.

WE'D LIKE TO KNOW: Whom the shoe fit when the cry went up, "There are spies in the crowd!" . . . who was smoking that stomach-pump . . . who was the T. M. I. fan who did some fast and fancy truckin' when that score was made . . . what did D. W. SHORT mean by declaring "they left out sanitation and are going back to hog-waller" . . . who are the "Men-About-Town" . . . The fans claim it was this and that causing that 6-0 score, but it seems to us to be just a prelude to a Hal-loween jinx. . . it could have been that CAPTAIN BADER's headgear was knocked off while walking under a ladder . . . or it could have been that a black cat crossed the Owls' path . . . but the way we fig-

A woman in Arkansas advertised for a husband and got one. The total cost of the want-ads used for the purpose was only $9.00.

According to the West Point (Miss.) Times Leader her husband joined the army and died a few weeks ago in the service. Upon his death she received $3,000 in cash from the government and an annual pension. Still there are those who do not believe in the value of advertising.

I once knew a man, however, who spent 75 cents advertising for a wife in a matrimonial journal, and before he got through with her she cost him a small fortune. With a wife it isn't always the first cost but the up-keep that counts.

The moral of these stories, if any, is to be sure you know just exactly what you want to buy or sell before you advertise it.

STATEMENT

To Our Customers, Friends and the Public in General.

By your appreciated patronage I have been able to build up a new business for HONDO, and our community. This new business is not strange to you. C. U. Barrientes, fruits and vegetables and a small line of clean groceries. By it, and to run it properly and efficiently, I am employing two of the best, courteous and honest men available for the delivery of this line to your door daily. One of them is a boy BORN HERE, a product of Hondo High School. These two men have families to whom they have to bring their daily bread JUST LIKE YOU DO TO YOURS.

Now I have three trucks that I have bought right here at home. These trucks are filled with home gasoline at home stations. When they are out of order, home mechanics do the adjusting and so on in every line of life; my firm is taking care of three families I pay from $15 to $20 monthly for lights, water and gas to our local concerns; I pay for the night watchman and street lights also, and for all this I am happy I can meet all of these obligations. I am proud to say that with honest, hard work I have been able to build all of this, and I repeat I am proud to have at your service, and for your accommodation a fruit stand and a fleet of good delivery trucks that are not available in other parts of our state, and all I ask of you now is for a part of your business. I am not trying for all of your trade. I understand that my other merchant friends have to have your patronage also. If you favor me with this, then I will be able to stay with you; and I am sure that a good American citizen of American extraction will not be disappointed, because I am talking to you sincerely like a business man. And I'll assure you, once more, that if I happen to get rich enough to die here, I will not take a penny along with me; I will leave it at home—HONDO.

Yours sincerely,

It-adv. —MECHLER-BRANGAN.

The marriage of Gertrude Mechler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Mechler, and Thomas Brangan, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Brangan, was solemnized Wednesday morning, Sept. 14, in Sacred Heart Church, Rev. Joseph Jacobi officiating. Gertrude Mehr and Alice and Mary Beth Brangan were bridesmaids; Mary Ruth Zimmermann was maid of honor, and Dorothy Mechler and Betty Ann Zimmermann were flower-girls.

Vincent Brangan served as best man for his brother, and George Kiefer and Joseph and William Hartman were ushers.

Following the ceremony, breakfast was served in the home of the bride's parents, and an informal reception was held in the evening.

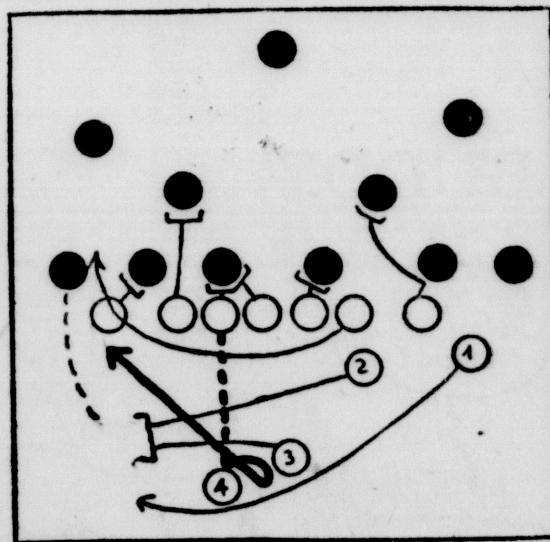

On their return from a wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Brangan will make their home in San Antonio.—The Southern Messenger.

ure . . . 'Twas a Friday and T. M. I.'s NO. 13 carried the ball!

Tonight with Del Rio cat fur and Hondo bird feathers flying in the breeze there'll be no time for languishing looks and hand-holding. . . but plenty of excitement assured. Come on out!

TOUCH-DOWN TACTICS

DARTMOUTH . . .
by
Earl Blaik
Head Football Coach

This is the third in a series of six outstanding diagram plays by leading college coaches from Grantland Rice's new Cities Service Football Guide.

THIS is one of those deceptive reverses. The success of this play depends on the playing habits of the defensive right end (or it can be reversed). If he is charging hard and fast he will be blocked out of the play. This play is to be used after the offense has had ample opportunity to study the defensive tactics of their opponents. The ball is snapped to the No. 1 back who takes a pass to either the No. 2 or No. 4 back, then spins and plunges over the weak side end. The No. 4 back should cross the line of scrimmage, ahead of and to the inside of the ball carrier, to be in blocking position.

"NOBODY'S BUSINESS."

By
Julian Capers, Jr.

The opinions here expressed are the author's own and not necessarily those of the Herald.—M. E.

AUSTIN, Oct. 4th.—The raising of tax money to pay increased pension benefits to aged persons, and to provide the State's share of other social security program,
proposed for dependent children,
including blind persons and teachers'
pensions, will constitute the No. 1 problem of the new legislature. It will consume most of the time of the four months' regular session.

Next will come governmental economy, and then will follow the inroduction of hundreds of bills, some embodying the ideas of large groups,
others those of a single individual member of House or Senate. A few of these, usually those backed by a substantial bloc of public opinion,
will be enacted, while the great majority will be good for a line or two in the newspapers for a day, and then die by the wayside, either in committee or on the calendar.

Truck Problem Looms

The tax program, of course, will depend largely upon the recommendations and plans of the new Governor,
as embodied in his first message.
Daniel has been giving concentrated study at his Fort Worth headquarters to this and other administrative matters, but has been keeping his own counsel upon details of what he will recommend. Whatever plan he suggests, will naturally encounter sturdy opposition from the group or groups which he proposes to tax.
A determined effort will be made in the new Legislature to enact legislation regulating the use of motor trucks upon the highways and increasing the present limit of 7,000 pounds of net load that a truck may carry.
Persistent efforts have been made to raise this load limit, which was enacted back when trucks used solid rubber tires, on the theory that heavy loads would damage the highways. Modernization of motor truck manufacture, together with universal use of scientifically designed pneumatic tires, have largely removed this objection, and the railroad lobby,
which has battled bitterly and successfully to curtail truck operations, has been largely during recent years
upon the argument that large loads mean larger trucks and that a resulting traffic hazard follows. The truck people, who have carried on a vigorous campaign, have answered this argument rather patly by showing that the larger the truck load, the fewer the number of trucks necessary to move traffic, and that the fewer trucks that are operated on the highways, the lower the traffic hazard. It is identically the same argument the railroads have used in opposing laws to limit the length of freight trains.

Valley Senator Is Sponsor

Another important phase of the truck problem is the fact that the privately owned motor trucks are largely unregulated, because the Supreme Court has held that under the present law, most of them are technically common carriers under the law. The impossibility of applying the common carrier law's provision to the thousands of private trucks was so manifest that the Railroad Commission, by unwritten agreement with the truck owners, is simply ignoring the Supreme Court decision
until the Legislature can enact a law
to regulate private trucks.

Rogers Kelly, Senator-elect from the Valley district, has declared he will push for enactment of truck legislation—because his Valley district moves millions of tons of fruit and vegetables to markets by truck each season—and Kelly, known in his district as an aggressive and able leader—probably will get results.

Economy Program

A Senate subcommittee of five members has been working for nearly two years on the problem of reducing the overhead of State departments, and out of their efforts will doubtless come some improvement. Their goal is a $5,000,000 to $6,000,000 cut in departmental expenditures. They hope to consolidate and abolish some bureaus and commissions, which is a difficult task, at best, because every little department has its bloc of supporters in the Legislature, whose loyalty is held by giving jobs to friends and relatives of the legislators. One improvement upon which everybody seems agreed, however, is the appointment of the State Auditor by a Legislative Committee, instead of by the Governor,
as at present, and the probable creation of a modernized budgeting setup. Many legislators have come to see the fallacy of asking the Board of Control, the largest single spending unit in the Government, to make the budget, as it now does.
Along with the plan for better

auditing and budgeting will go plans for abolishing some of the 102
special funds in the State Treasury,
so that officials can more nearly get an actual picture of the State's real financial condition from periodic statements by the Treasurer and Comptroller.

Fair Trade Act
The last gubernatorial race brought out what was apparently a widespread agreement that some kind of anti-price cutting legislation should be passed, to protect independent merchants against "loss leader" merchandising. If the Legislature believes as firmly in this as the gubernatorial candidates did, some legislation along this line probably will result. The chain stores, who are opposing it, optimistically hope to get the chain store tax repealed, but best information here gives them
little hope at this time.

Two Corrections
Whenever a newspaper reporter begins to brag, he is usually headed for trouble. This columnist recently indulged in a mild brag about a news beat in this column. Now he humbly corrects two mistakes in last week's column. No. 1—The McFarland who is being boomed for State Tax Commissioner is Representative McFarland, of Wichita Falls, veteran House member and tax expert, and NOT Congressman W. D. McFarlane, of Wichita Falls, defeated for re-election in August. No. 2—The uncertainty about when certain State officials, including the Land Commissioner and the Attorney General, shall take office, was clarified by the last legislature, and definite dates fixed. January 1, is the date for beginning the terms of elective officials except the Governor, who takes office January 17.

Garrison Succeeds Carmichael
The Department of Public Safety, which as the nearest approach to a civil service or merit system in the State government, adhered to this policy this week, when it named Homer Garrison Jr., youthful assistant director, to succeed the late H.
H. Carmichael, as director of the State Police system. Garrison, a deputy sheriff at Lufkin when he was 19, has been with the department
since it was created, and has a brilliant record.

SCOUT NOTES.

A Scout's Training Institute will be held at Boy Scout Headquarters, 2519 Broadway, San Antonio, Texas,
on October 14th, 15th and 16th under the supervision of the Ninth Regional Office with James P. Fitch, Regional Scout Executive in charge.
The Institute will open with a dinner meeting on Friday, October 14th and close Sunday afternoon at 4:30 P. M.
More than 100 Scouters from the State of Texas are expected to attend.

The following courses will be offered: Elements of Scout Leadership, Parts I and II; Principles of Scout Leadership, Clubmaster Training and Council Planning.

Chaplain Wm. J. Walsh, Chairman of the Leadership Training Committee of the Alamo Area Council, Boy Scouts of America is working up a good delegation from this Council.

Reports to the University of Texas
Bureau of Business Research from 106 Texas department stores show a decline in dollar sales during July of 20.2 per cent from June and 6.8 per cent from July last year. Normally the decline from June to July is about 24 per cent. The decline during the first seven months of this year from the like period last year was 0.8 per cent. The percentage of credit sales to total sales during of July was substantially above that of a year ago; while the percentage of collections to outstanding accounts dropped substantially. This situation seems to suggest further restriction in consumer purchasing power.

KILLA-WORM
GUARANTEED TO KILL SCREW WORMS

THE BOSS.

By Olive May Snook.

"I'm sick o' workin' fer a boss
'N slavin by the hour
To help him make a mint o' gold
And feel its mighty power.

What could he do with all his brain
Except for men like me?
He holds the reins, we hold the plow
No differ'nse as I see.

Yet, he hauls in the gold while I
Just bow to his decree
That, cause a man aint quick to think,
He's got to bend the knee

To such as him. Well, I am through
A workin' fer a boss;
I'll git a ranch 'n raise some hay
'N keep a cow 'n hoss.

I'll live the easy life myself,
I'll plant some spuds 'n corn,
N run my ranch jest like a king
Till Gabriel blows his horn."

This I reasoned—bought the ranch!
It took all we had saved;
The wife, she fumed and fussed a bit
'N sometimes almost raved,

She said I'd find it was no snap.
This tillin' of the soil—
A workin' hard all summer for
The harvest of the fall.

The first year crops wuz good; I felt
That I wuz well repaid;
It proved that I wuz right, I wuz,
In all the plans I made.

The next year—well, it wa'n't so good;
The market seemed to slip
Until, with harvest bountiful,
No money could I git.

My taters didn't bring ten cents
A bushel, and the wheat—
Why, everyone in all the world
Had more than they could eat.
But I wuz not discouraged yet—
Another year I'd win;
I'd put my farm all in to hops—
The mere thought made me grin.

Fer men must always have their beer
To keep their spirits up—
I'd prove that I could run a ranch
And drink the brimmin' cup.

Well, you all know what Volstead
did,
Tellin' all them lies
About how, if we'd quit the drinks
We'd soon be eatin' pies

'N livin' on the country's fat—
No mortgages to pay—
He made us all believe it too,
Until he'd had his way.

In consequence, my farm's produce
Wuz never picked at all.
'Cause hops wuz plentiful that year
The market took a fall.

'N next year it wuz someth'n worse:
The cows all got T. B.,
The sows all lost their litters,
'N Ma wuz sick, yu see.

Then I decided that a little Business of my own
Where I'd not hev to work so hard
Could be run in the town.

I knew that money I could make Quite easy in that way—
I'd run a fillin' station there—
It couldn't help but pay.

No overhead to profits eat—
I thought 'twould be clear gain;
But when I watched the cars all pass,
My hopes began to wane.

And so I bought a grocery store—
Folks had to have such stuff.
But when I came to pay the bills
There wasn't half enough

To pay fer all that went to waste
'N rotted in the bag.
These worries drove me almost mad
And made my spirits drag.

I think I'd ruther help the boss
To coin a little gold
'N git my pay check regular,
'N save fer when I'm old.

OUTSIDE OF THAT, IT WAS O. K.

After the address the lecturer asked a member of the audience how he had liked it.

"I had just three faults to find
with it," stated the listener.
"And what were they?"

"First, it was read. Second, it wasn't well read. And third, it wasn't worth reading!"

SIMILE

The audience was as numerous as shrinking violets in Hollywood.—L.

COUNTRY WAYS

When red-birds have gone with their chirruping song
And the robins deserted their nest
Then the clamorous notes of a now
transient throng
Of wild-geese from out of the west,
Sounds over the forest of crimson and gold
Made glorious by fingers of frost,
And we scan country places for beauties untold
Where beauties of Autumn are tossed.

Oh, memory stirs at the sight and the sound
Of crows, cawing over the lane
Where beves of brown-feathered quails abound
Each clad in a priestly soutane.
Though cities attract with their glamour and cheer
Give me ways of the country, when Autumn is here!

WHEN I GO BACK

When I go in pursuit of years,
And walk into the distant past;
Remembering the world's bright tears
Before I come to rest at last.

I still can feel your hand in mine,
And see again your tender smile
As clear as sun-kissed dew drops shine,
'Tho many moons have passed the while.

Somewhere tonight the earth is gay,
But stars will fade like sun-kissed
dew;
I wonder if some other day
Will find me dreaming here with you.

CARLOT SHIPMENTS.

Notwithstanding corn is selling at 39c per bushel and pasture grass is drying up, the last two weeks has seen twenty-two cars of corn shipped from Hondo. The fact that corn has become our chief money crop, since boll-weevils rendered cotton-growing unprofitable, probably accounts for the sacrifice.

One car of cattle to Fort Worth and a car of wool to the Eastern markets constitute the only car lots
out in the last two weeks.

Over the same period four cars
of gasoline and two of flour and mill products have been received.

The season's shipment of cotton has reached 341 bales.

Mrs. T. E. Boggs was a pleasant caller at this office Monday. Mrs.
Boggs is a daughter of the late Xavier Wantz, an Indian fighter, and descendant of the original Castro Colonists. She, therefore, feels a deep interest in the plans for a centennial celebration in 1944 of the 100th anniversary of the first white settlement in Medina County by the Castro colonists at Castroville. She thinks a celebration befitting the event should be arranged.

ly, will spend about a month here.
Mrs. Maw had just arrived from the East where she had gone through some harrowing experiences during the terrible storm which struck the Eastern seaboard about ten days ago.

E. S. Rieber, cooperative observer for the U. S. Department of Agriculture Weather Bureau, reports the following record for Upper Hondo for the month of September. Total precipitation: .80 inch; 12 clear days, 16 partly cloudy, 2 cloudy, with prevailing Southeast wind. Since Jan. 1, 1938, the total precipitation has been 23.60 inches. The maximum temperature was 98 degrees on the 10th, 29th and 30th; minimum was 53 on the 19th. Rain is badly needed. Sheep shearing and the sowing of oats are under way at Upper Hondo, according to Mr. Rieber.

Mrs. George Bendele was hostess
to the Ladies' Aid Society of St.
Paul's Lutheran Church Wednesday
afternoon, October 5. The meeting opened with a song and a Scripture
reading, Luke 15, the three parables
of the prodigal son, the lost sheep
and the lost coin, with the pastor,
Rev. Paul Czerkus, addressing some inspirational remarks on the subject.

In the business meeting it was decided to give a dinner and bazaar
Thursday, October 20th, in the Nes-
ter building. The flower committee appointed for the month includes
Mrs. Alred Meehler and Mrs. Felix
Batot.

Refreshments of sandwiches,
cookies and iced tea were served to
the following: Rev. Czerkus, Mes-
dames Emmitt Nester, Wm. Mus-
sleman, C. F. Haass, F. R. Grube, Felix
Batot, H. E. Haass, Annie Stiegler,
L. A. Meehler, Alice Reinhardt, Aug.

OCTOBER 12th TO BE BIG DAY IN SEGUIN.

President L. J. FitzSimon, of the Seguin Centennial Association, announces that:

Thousands of people are expected to pour into Seguin on October 12th
for a great Homecoming to witness a colorful Parade, Queen's Coronation and Ball, and to take part in a round of events that will bring to a climax
the Centennial year celebration of this 100-year-old city.

Invitations have been mailed to every former resident of Seguin whose address is known to the Centennial Committee. There have been many hundreds of responses to the invitation "to come back and help us celebrate", and a great gathering of "home-comers" is expected. All former residents attending the celebration will be asked to register on the morning of October 12th at the Municipal Building.

A long parade of beautiful floats and colorful bands will begin its march through city streets on the morning of October 12th to officially open the day's celebration.

Another spectacular event will be an historical pageant at night, an Emile A. Robin production, depicting the hundred years of history and progress of Seguin. The historical theme will be supplemented by interesting and artistic dances and effective lighting, and there will be a royal court with all the splendor of beautiful costumes in which many surrounding cities will be represented by princesses. It is being produced by Emile A. Robin and directed by H. M. Griffith, both of San Antonio, who are well known all over the State.

With the parade in the morning—
homecoming festivities, band concerts at Starcke Park and Central Park in the afternoon—the pageant in the early evening—the day will be climaxed with a gala Centennial Ball
beginning at 10:00 o'clock at night,
at which the music will be furnished
by Rex Preis' popular KTSA orchestra.

Carrying out its slogan, "Si Senor, See Seguin!", the Centennial Association is eager for each person attending to note all the improvements that have been accomplished by the progressive citizens of Seguin.

4-H CLUB GIRLS TO ATTEND ENCAMPMENT.

Melvira Rothe, D'Hanis; Dorothy
Faye Ward, Yancey and Mary Belle Carle, D'Hanis; will represent Medina County 4-H Club Girls' at the Dallas Fair 4-H club girls' educational encampment on Oct. 11-13. The encampment is sponsored by the Educational Department of the Dallas
Fair Association and the Extension Dept. of A. & M. College. This association will pay all expenses of the three day encampment.

These three girls won their trip
on the basis of the club work which they have done this year. Girls from all over the county submitted records and histories of their work,
and a committee composed of Mrs.
Oscar Batot, Hondo; Mrs. H. Z.
Windrow, Hondo; and Mrs. Louis
Oefinger, Quilici; judged the histories and made the awards.

These three girls will join a group of club girls in San Antonio on Monday, Oct. 10 and leave for Dallas via the M. K. T. railway.

4-H club work in the county is conducted under the direction of Miss Nell Foley, County home demonstration agent.

LADIES AID MEETS.

Mrs. George Bendele was hostess
to the Ladies' Aid Society of St.
Paul's Lutheran Church Wednesday
afternoon, October 5. The meeting
opened with a song and a Scripture
reading, Luke 15, the three parables
of the prodigal son, the lost sheep
and the lost coin, with the pastor,
Rev. Paul Czerkus, addressing some inspirational remarks on the subject.

In the business meeting it was decided to give a dinner and bazaar
Thursday, October 20th, in the Nes-
ter building. The flower committee
appointed for the month includes
Mrs. Alred Meehler and Mrs. Felix
Batot.

Refreshments of sandwiches,
cookies and iced tea were served to
the following: Rev. Czerkus, Mes-
dames Emmitt Nester, Wm. Mus-
sleman, C. F. Haass, F. R. Grube, Felix
Batot, H. E. Haass, Annie Stiegler,
L. A. Meehler, Alice Reinhardt, Aug.

Amanda Muenchink, L. F. Grube,
Paul Reinhardt, Alfred Breiten, Ben Oefinger, and George Bendele, and Misses Mary Lena Karm and Alice Muenchink.

LACOSTE H. D. CLUB NEWS.

The LaCoste H. D. Club met Miss Nell Foley on Tuesday afternoon, at the home of Mrs. Wilfred Hutzler, with 12 members present. After the business meeting was over the meeting was turned over to Miss Foley,
where she gave a most interesting demonstration on "Improved Methods of Cleaning Colthes in the Homes".
A very delicious lunch was served consisting of sandwiches, cookies, and iced tea. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Louisa Hitzfelder, on Tuesday, October 18,
at 1:30.

QUIHI NOTES.

And this stone which I have set for a pillar, shall be God's house; and of all that thou shalt give me I will surely give the tenth unto thee. Gen. 28:22.

Was Jacob's religion of a low-level, materialistic type, using God merely for a generous provider with a large commissariat or supply-house for stomach, cellar, barns and fields; the bread-kneading for which the thousands clamored after Christ had fed them; the benign old Father that has only the avoidupois interests of his children in mind, their well-groomed bodies in proportionate pounds and ounces, until they had their fill and break under the digestive strain, and are laid in a silent grave, turning into fertilizing decompositions for the harvest of new generations? No doubt, that's the concept, the understanding, of much too many. It was not Jacob's view, though the wording of his vow seemed to point in that direction. We remember how he stressed material commodities and conveniences, namely protection, guidance, bread, raiment and home-happiness. If the Lord provides all that, "he shall be my God". We must concede that in those primitive days of pioneering and eking out a bare subsistence out of an uncultivated and almost barren soil, encircled by semi-savage and jealous tribes, the items mentioned had particular importance. Still, the spiritual side of his religion was by no means forgotten. Proof? In V. 15, the Lord had promised these very things, plainly and unmistakably, and Jacob merely repeats those promises, and vows, if that's the case, how could I do otherwise than to abide with Him as my Lord and God. There is no element of suspicion and doubt in his vow. He takes it for granted that the Lord will never go back on His promises. He never does. And the text above furnishes additional proof. There is no if and but in his future intention of placing this pillar for a house of God, and returning the tenth of all his income as a thank-offering unto the Lord. And he has kept his word. And all his offsprings followed in the footsteps of their tribal father. And so it happened, centuries later, when the tabernacle was building, Moses had to restrain the people from bringing more gifts for the building fund. And so it happened, due to that "tenth", there was no such thing as pauperism and poverty in Israel. That "primitive" Jacob has started something there with that "house of God". That was all but primitive and crude in thought and idealism and religious fervor. In its wake came the long and magnificent array from the unparalleled temple at Jerusalem down to the St. John's cathedral in New York and whatever lies in between in cities and rural districts, erected with consummate skill and artistry, and made possible by the liberal donations of individual benefactors and, more so, by the collective co-operation of grateful worshippers. "Waste", some maintain. So said Judas when Mary broke that alabaster flask. "There are bigger edifices built in competition and opposition to the houses of God", others observe. Correct. So was the Tower of Babel overtopping them. "Let's leave that bulky, useless stone-pile; you can't even build a decent nest there", said the sparrows about the new church. Sparrow-logic. "More fun at the temples of Hollywood idols or the wild pleasures of night life", howls the Broadway crowd and their many followers everywhere. Is that the fabric human happiness and peace with God is made of? No wonder even Einstein, the freethinker, wails about "a serious weakening of moral thought and sentiment and the barbarization of political ways; about the surrender to primitive animal instincts". While Cordell Hull, our Secretary of State, ejaculates in dire terms, "Humanity desperately needs today a moral and spiritual rebirth, a revitalization of religion. There is no sure way to this supreme goal save through adherence to the teaching of the Bible". And isn't the "house of God" the exponent and representative force and agency for all that? Jacob was not so "primitive" after all. Nor is he primitive and old-fashioned in giving the tenth unto the Lord, a free-will tax, a love assessment, that climbs far above modern Christian giving, where the Lord often bows His head in surprise and shame—for the giver. True?

Fatalities do not happen on the highway only. Also the country roads offer many chances. The dust raised there during these dry days, obscuring the visibility for the road ahead, increases the danger, and slow driving, perhaps with lights on in the cloud, might be advisable. Benno Walch, his mother and Mrs. Herbert Brucks, went through the excitement of one of these terrifying experiences. The car turned over, we hear, but the occupants were uninjured. Cause for sincere thanks.

Miss Florence Grell and Mrs. Oscar Grell were received into membership here; the latter after a course of instruction and a brief service in the presence of the church-council. They are welcome in our midst.

RECENT BRIDE HONORED.

Mrs. Alford Weber, formerly Miss Adeline Krennmüller, was the recipient of a miscellaneous shower given at the O. D. H. S. Hall, Dunlay, on Sunday, October 2, from 2:30 to 5:00 P. M. Hostesses were Mesdames Oscar Bendele, Rudolph Krennmüller, Joe Krennmüller, John Krennmüller, Harry Oefinger, Arnold Mussman, Laura Graff, and Misses Marcella Krennmüller, Mary Belle Embrey, Modine Bendele, Ruby Dell Weber and Irene Neuman.

On arriving the guests were asked to register in the bride's book, which was presided over by Miss Mary Belle Embrey. Cut flowers and ferns were used to decorate the hall, while the stage was arranged with streamers of pink and white forming a pretty background for the honoree's chair. The latter, ornamented with a few of the streamers which were attached with a large bow, was situated directly in front of the stage between two smaller chairs containing tiny bows. The gifts were placed on the stage beneath the streamers.

The honoree, charmingly gowned in her wedding dress of black and white and wearing a corsage of pink and white rosebuds, was escorted to the chair of honor by two of her nieces, Doris May Bendele and Loraine Oefinger. The little misses' frocks were of pink crepe trimmed with white lace, and each wore a Shirley Temple bow in her hair.

After the bride and her attendants were seated the gifts were presented to her, were opened and passed to the guests.

Refreshments consisting of pink ice cream and white layer cake were served to the guests who numbered about seventy-five.

CANNON TO DRILL ON MEDINA BLOCK.

C. H. Cannon and others of Dallas have erected a rig and are about ready to spud in the No. 1 August Saathoff in Western Medina County, three and a half miles southwest of D'Hanis. The block is one that was assembled by B. L. Raborn a year or so ago and the geology of the situation is helped out by the fact that an old well drilled only to a few hundred feet is still making heavy oil.

The Cannon test will go to the Edwards lime and the location is 300 feet north of the south line and 300 feet east of the west line of the Garcia Montez Duran Survey No. 844.—San Antonio Express.

MISS FINGER HONORED.

Miss Mary Emma Finger, whose marriage to Lt. Gale Ellis of Kelly Field, will be an event of Saturday, October 8th, is being complimented with several pre-nuptial courtesies. Among the most charming affairs was the tea and shower from 4 to 6 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, October 4th, at the home of Mrs. H. J. Meyer in Hondo. Hostesses were Mesdames H. J. Meyer, Earl Boon, Charles Finger, Alfred Rath, Robert Zuberbuehler, Henry Muenink, J. H. Meyer, W. O. Rothe and Horace Cox Jr. and Miss Mary Ann Noonan.

Autumn flowers were used in decoration of the home. Yellow and white chrysanthemums were used in the reception hall, gift room and dining room. The living room had crystal vases of pink and white asters, with lighted pink candles in crystal holders and a low bowl of the favorite blossoms adorning the mantle.

The receiving line was composed of Mrs. H. J. Meyer, Miss Mary Emma Finger, her mother, Mrs. J. M. Finger, and her fiancée's mother, Mrs. Howard Ellis, of Beaver Falls, Pa. The bride's book was in charge of Misses Mary Ann Noonan and Mary Elizabeth Meyer. A musicale was presented during the tea hours by Mrs. C. D. Sadler, pianist.

In the dining room, the other members of the house party alternated in serving the punch and cake. The table, covered with a lace cloth, had a beautiful center arrangement of white feverfew and yellow pompon chrysanthemums in a crystal bowl and white flame-tipped tapers in branched crystal candelabra. The punch bowl at one end of the table was placed in a circle of white feverfew and dwarf yellow mums, and reflected in a mirror plaque. The cake, served from the other end of the refreshment board, was a white confection embossed with sugar-spun yellow giant chrysanthemums and green leaves. The center arrangement of the table was repeated on the buffet.

Mrs. Meyer was handsome in powder blue lace with a corsage of pink asters. Miss Finger's beautiful frock was of ice blue satin, accented with a corsage of pink radiance roses. Mrs. Finger was costumed in hyacinth blue chiffon and her flowers were pink asters. The black taffeta gown with black lace at the bodice, worn by Mrs. Ellis, had flower decor of cream purple-throated gladioluses. About 125 guests called.

Misses Martha Seng, Mary Lou Weyman, Ann and Jane Strain entertained with a tea and crystal shower from 5 to 7 P. M. Wednesday in the home of the Misses Strain in San Antonio, complimenting Miss Mary Emma Finger.

Those from here attending were Mrs. J. M. Finger, Mrs. Volney Boon and Miss Frances and Rose Marie Finger.

CHEVON BARBECUE.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar S. Rieber entertained with a chevon barbecue on Bandera Creek, near their ranch home at Upper Hondo, Sunday, Oct. 2. The delicious meat with all the trimmings to go with it, made the noon hour a most pleasant one for all present.

Those who enjoyed the day were: Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Rieber, Mr. and Mrs. Hugo Batot, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Batot, J. P. Redmond, Frances Beal, Mr. and Mrs. John Schweers and daughter, Nettie, Mrs. August Schuchle and Albert Heyen, of Hondo; Mr. and Mrs. Louis Rieber and Mrs. Richard Cummings and children of Seco; Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Monier and daughter, of Tarpley; Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Mangold and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Willie Sprott and daughters, Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Eckhart and children, Mr. and Mrs. P. C. Jagge and son, Mr. and Mrs. F. D. Garrison and children, Mrs. Ralph Del La Moniere and son, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Rieber and children, Walter and Augusta Scheile, Austin Coughran, and the hosts, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar S. Rieber, all of Upper Hondo.

The editor of The Anvil Herald is pleased to acknowledge receipt of a season pass to all the hometown games to be played this season by the Crystal City High School Football team. Crystal City played Hondo's Owls to a scoreless tie at the beginning of the season.

Mrs. J. M. Finger and daughter, Miss Mary Emma, and their guest, Mrs. Howard Ellis of Beaver Falls, Pa., attended the graduation of Lt. Gale Ellis at Kelly Field Wednesday morning.

Mrs. Charlotte Miller continues confined to her bed at her home here. Her daughter, Mrs. Arnold Rothe of San Antonio is at her bedside.

Mrs. Matt Rath's friends regret to hear of her illness and wish her a speedy return to good health.

Mr. Felix Batot, lumberman, has been on the indisposed list for the past week.

HONDO HOME DEMONSTRATION CLUB.

Nine members of the Hondo Home Demonstration Club met at the home of Mrs. H. Z. Windrow, Monday afternoon, Oct. 3.

Mrs. Alfred Schweers, president of the club, presided over the meeting. Election of 1939 officers was held, and those elected are as follows: President, Mrs. Oscar Batot; Vice-president, Miss Henrietta Batot; Secretary-Treasurer, Mrs. Louis Bohmfalk; Council Delegate, Mrs. Hugo Batot; Reporter, Mrs. H. Z. Windrow.

A report was given of the last county council meeting.

Mrs. Windrow served cake and limeade to those present.

The next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. R. J. Noonan, Tuesday afternoon, October 18, at 2 o'clock P. M.

BURBANK BERRY IS A WONDER.

The Burbank Berry, a cross between dewberries and raspberries, is the most delicious and profitable of the trellised berry type grown in the famous Arkansas strawberry country. The berries are unusually large, have small seed and the flavor cannot be surpassed. The vine is the best drought, flood and freeze resisting plant I ever saw.

One Arkansas grower received approximately $3,000 from 15 acres this year. If you are interested in knowing more about this wonderful berry, send your name and address on a post card, and when my fall literature is ready, you will receive full particulars.

ABOUT THE ORCHARD

Last month Mrs. Edward Schnable asked had I ever tried growing mangoes in Texas. I have never tried growing them though they might be grown and I am sure they can be grown in the Valley. The loquat is a tropical fruit. I have had a number of them growing outdoors now for three or four years. I have a big banana stalk south of a building. It froze back to the ground last winter and came out this spring, sending up half a dozen suckers. But below these suckers the main stalk is a foot thick and the thing was not larger than the thumb when set last April year or about eighteen months ago. We must be moving south. If we keep having freak winters the peach trees are all getting out of cycle. I am wondering if we will have to get different varieties to adapt themselves to our changing season. Were it not for one cold spell, and that spell late in the spring, we could actually raise oranges in this part of the state. I have had cape jasmines out for the last four years and none have been killed. I am wondering if these freak winters will keep up, and this is not the only freak. It seems we had a freak election but that is not as bad as a freak winter or freak weather. It is bad that we cannot look into the future. And the below may be off the fruit subject. A man of my acquaintance sold his wheat crop for fifty cents per bushel. The so-called good flour is still $1.80 for a forty-eight pound sack. Why doesn't someone invent a small flour mill, one that a farmer can buy and use for the neighborhood. A bushel of wheat will nearly make a sack of flour with surplus that will also pay for the work. The flour mill man gets more than a dollar profit from a bushel of wheat. That is too much.

—ATO—

In a recent Sunday section of several papers a picture was shown of a tree that had been doctored with cement. The people who do this are ignorant of plant life or they want to take advantage of their ignorance. I make this statement mindful that a fellow who was elected governor of a state was a so-called tree surgeon. I hate to see nice trees ruined in such a way for in a few years they will be blown down and at best if they are not packed full of cement they have a chance to heal over if they are fertilized and kept hoed around. If in some way you were to get a hole in your side and some doctor were to stuff cotton in that hole and keep it there you would never get well. Plant life is very little different to animal life. If you have a wound and are well taken care of that wound will heal; the same thing holds good with the trees. The only reason they get over with this tree surgeon business is because people forget or move away or if one is packed full of cement and blows down the owner says he had done all he could for the tree. The cement stops any further strengthening of the tree and it is bound to die in a few years. The thing that makes the dog faces on trees are high winds or lightning and out in the woods, fire. Nature at once begins to try to grow bark over these places, but the bark will almost invariably refuse to grow over this cement. Think of this a few minutes; you can see this is right.

—ATO—

We read a great deal about the Burbank Institute in the papers. This is a scheme to sell fifteen cent trees for four dollars each. In some ways they claim that if any new trees are found they will give five and six thousand dollars each for these new trees. These fellows work through the daily papers and land suckers. It is often claimed that five thousand each is given for a new tree but there is nothing to show that this actually happened. In fact I doubt that more than a few dollars ever has been paid for a single tree. We are often told to look out for a limb on a tree that bears finer fruit than the rest of the limb. There are very few bud sports, but an expert grafter can put a limb on a tree in a way that it looks like it naturally grew on that tree. There is no way for an amateur to tell the difference unless the plant were cut down and split open. Thousands of these so called bud sports are just limbs grafted on a tree. Several years ago there was the red delicious apple found in the state of Washington. This apple came up from seed. It was a red Delicious and got ripe about a month before the regular Delicious. Those fellows up in Washington got a trade mark on the apple and called it Rich Red. Of course a descriptive name like this will not stand up as a trade mark, copyright or in any way. But just the same when these fellows began to sell Rich Red trees there were half a dozen trees discovered over the east with limbs of red apples on them. Several of these were named and copyrighted but they all proved to be just exactly like the apples from Washington, showing they were not bud sports as claimed but that the limbs had been grafted on. One of the Steubenrauch peaches was carried to Illinois and now that tree is patented. All of which is interesting to the man who is expecting to invest money in fruit trees. If you are acquainted with the principals of grafting, you can take a small augur or gimlet and bore a hole anywhere on an apple tree, the hole should be reamed out a little, then a limb selected just the size of this hole and the limb rimmed just to fit. This is waxed and will grow a limb that will deceive even an expert. I knew a fellow who became so proficient at this he made pecan limbs come out on the side of big pecan trees. This is how ninety per cent of the so-called bud sports are grown and the claim that any thing is ever paid for such as this is a pure fake, but it was Barnum who said the American people like to be fooled. Or did he say a sucker was born every minute? There is another thing you have often seen pictures of trees like this in pens. This is not to keep any one from getting buds off the tree but to keep the fake tree from being too closely examined.

This time of year you can often go into your garden and find a lot of your tomato or pepper plants looking down in the mouth; in fact they look like they could not be consoled under any circumstances. They look as blue as some men pondering over the national debt. Or you can go to your peach orchard and you may find some trees looking the same way. If you pull one up the roots look like varicose veins. The plants and trees will likely die. But you may wonder what is the cause of their undoing. Even cotton and peanuts will some time get in the same kind of way. The trouble is nemetode, a very small worm in this case though there are nemetodes in the world seven feet long. They are one of the most destructive of all creatures. At the same time there are classes of nemetodes that help the farmer. They are some of the folks that live around us and sometimes on us and they are in a way just as wonderful as any other of nature's creatures. But I said some nemetodes help the farmer. There is a nemetode that exists in grasshoppers. You know in some soils grasshoppers never eat things up and maybe in a mile of that place grasshoppers will peel the bark off the trees. Some soils are infested with these grasshopper nemetodes. Go out on the prairie and about every other grasshopper you catch will have a couple of horn looking things on its posterior end. I use this big word because doctors use it and I think it means back end. Anyhow it is the end on the end that does have the head on it. These two horns are used for digging in the ground and only the female grasshopper has them. She digs a small round hole in the ground and elongates the posterior end until it is twice as long as usual. Then she sticks this back end deep into the ground and lays a cluster of eggs. And if the soil is moist that proves her undoing for she gets full of nemetodes. And when her eggs begin to hatch the young hoppers get full of nemetodes. That is an example of nemetodes that help men, but the tribe of nemetodes I mentioned at first do not help us. They bore into the roots of our plants and kill them. They get in the soil and will stay for many years ready to ruin any plants you set on that soil. If you set peach trees on soil that has nemetodes they never thrive and if you happen to set a peach tree that has nemetodes in the nursery it will transfer the nemetode to your soil. This time of year, if you have real good eyes, you can see these small worms in the knots on the plants. The old mother nemetode is usually father and mother both. In some instances male nemetodes are hatched, but they remain old bachelors all their lives like some congressmen. In fact, a male nemetode is of very little use to the nemetode family. Now I am getting this letter all mixed up, but after the female nemetode lays her eggs she does a funny thing; she swells up and bursts. I do not know whether or not endorsing the wrong candidate makes her bust, but burst she does. This kind of nemetode has a straight alimentary canal; they do not have any lungs or heart and one was never known to have liver trouble. If you go to the nurseryman and buy what is called balled plants in many instances that is the best way of all to get nemetodes in your soil. The nurseryman is glad to sell them to you that way and diseased roots are covered up. If you are setting out a plum, peach, apricot or fig orchard it will by all means pay you to go over every tree and be sure not to get nemetodes in your soil. If any root looks suspicious it will pay to suspicion that tree. If you buy trees and they look like someone has taken a knife and carefully trimmed the roots off regard them with suspicion. Nemetodes in soil destroy half its value. A man could write a story about nemetodes a great deal longer than the life of our next governor, but maybe the above will serve to keep someone from getting a nice yard or farm infested. There is even a species of nemetodes that infest house cats and go from there to man.

A man in Van Zandt county has written me and asked for advice about setting an orchard. He says the land is now set with Bermuda grass but he is going to kill the grass out this summer. I pity any man with Bermuda grass soil, but it can be killed. No matter how much he fights it this fall he will have some grass next year. If the land is planted in an orchard he will have to be careful about these spots and kill them out next season. The gentleman says the land is rather poor, has been in cultivation for many years, and he would like to know the best varieties of fruit to set. On poor land I would certainly set early fruit. This man is near one of the best markets in the state, Dallas, and it seems early fruit is in great demand at Dallas. The Mayflower peach sells well there and the South Haven goes without any boosting. It seems in that part of the state Beauty in some way does not do so well, but even the Mamie Ross sells there. He also wanted to get some apples. Likely his land is rather shallow for apples. Just set a few to experiment with. He also will set a few pears though pears do not seem to do as well in that section as they do in other places. This gentleman asked about setting cherries and I think that would be useless. They just won't do good on any except the deepest sand and then maybe too far south. But he can raise

SEPTEMBER RECALL

September comes again, and from the pool.

And from the beach, vacation children come,
Their thoughts upon the opening of school

Are much the same in country or in slum.

The summer slowly dies and fades away,

And children most of all feel sharp regret.

They know the autumn will have times as gay,

But in their hearts they cherish summer yet.

There is a pleasure in the summer sun

Far greater than the pleasure found in books,

And nearly everyone finds summer done

While yet his heart longs for the fields and brooks.

Perhaps the children, if they had a choice,

Would prefer to have the summer stay,

But ringing school bells drown each piping voice,

And off to school they take their laggard way.

—J. E. ELLIOTT

An appropriate poem for the honor position this month is "September Recall" by J. E. Elliott. School days are ushered in with the new month, and while we can't quite agree with the poet that all recalled school children "take their laggard way", the general feeling is present in the poem. Summer's pleasures soon give way to the joy and gaiety of reunion of classmates and the experience of making new friends.

That is, of course, if your child is not the timid soul described by Juliette Frazier in her current contribution on child training, "Barbara Jean's First Day at School". There is some timely and valuable advice contained therein for the mother whose child is headed schoolward for the first time. And please, we beg of you, don't over-dress the "mite". We might add here, that the best and safest clothes for the small child to wear are those that are bright and colorful—so that they may be seen clearly and readily by motorists as they cross thoroughfares to and from school. One accident prevented is worth all the frills and furbelows in the world.

Don't let all your attention center on your children. Give a kindly thought to the loneliness of a new teacher in a strange town. Mrs. Frazier breaks the social ice by giving "A Welcome Party For The New Teacher", an example in friendliness that all would do well to follow.

A problem that begins with the first ringing of the school bell and lasts for nine long months is the school lunch. The illustrated article, "When It's Time to Fill the Cookie Jar", by Barbara B. Brooks, takes care of the sweets for that lunch box. It also satisfies the sweet-tooth when the youngsters arrive home from school hungry for a snack. The "Do You Know That—" column also has some suggestions about the school lunch, as well as other practical pointers in homemaking.

Have you noticed the new column? Although slim at this time, we hope it will grow to be a very valuable source of information to our readers. If you can give the needed advice requested in "Can You Answer This?" you will be adding your bit to the good service we wish to render. Send in any troublesome household problems you would like to have solved, as well as answers you may have to supply your neighbor's needs.

All along we have urged readers of this department to cut out those items which interest them most and make a scrap book. Now we can offer the scrap book complete in the form of a bound volume of Fletcher's Farming. The volume contains twelve issues of this magazine and in them you will find all the recipes and hints for the household you intended to keep but didn't. Fifty cents brings you the bound book.

A WELCOME PARTY FOR THE NEW TEACHER.

By Juliette Frazier, D. Litt.

A Welcome Party for the new rural school teacher provides an excellent way for the teacher and the parents to get acquainted. Last year at a meeting of the Hillside School Board such a "get-together" affair was suggested by one of the members, who had been a teacher herself at one time. She knew how homesick and lonesome a rural school teacher often feels when she finds herself a long distance from home and friends, in a district where all are strangers to her.

The suggestion was favored by all present, and the result of the party was a pleasant relationship between the parents and the teacher which gave the teacher a better understanding of how to handle the behavior problems of the children placed into her care.

The affair was held at the home of one of the members of the School Board, and all parents and children were urged to be present.

The reception room was simply decorated with festoons of crepe paper in the school's color, which was purple and green. A few bouquets of purple and white asters placed here and there provided the necessary festive atmosphere.

A simple buffet luncheon was served from a long table above which was suspended from the chandelier a large banner reading, "Welcome to Our Teacher." The refreshments consisted of bread-and-butter sandwiches, cold slices of roast beef, and ham, pickles, potato salad, apple pie, ice cream, cake, nuts and candy, coffee, and chocolate.

Upon the wall was a large blackboard upon which a tailless donkey was drawn with chalk. All the guests were blindfolded in turn, led to the blackboard, given a piece of chalk, and told to draw a tail on the donkey. To the one who came nearest putting the tail where it belonged, was given a framed picture of the school house.

For the amusement of the children present, a few simple guessing games and judging contests were introduced. Sociability was promoted among the grown-ups by asking each one to tell some amusing or exciting incident which took place during his school days. The one who told the most amusing or interesting story received a box of home-made candy.

This entertainment proved such a success that the School Board of two other districts have adopted this method of "getting acquainted with the teacher".

When It's Time to Fill the Cookie Jar

Cape Cod molasses cookies have the tang of old-fashioned gingerbread and a pleasantly nutty flavor imparted by a generous sprinkling of all-bran throughout the batter.

By Barbara B. Brooks

A COOKIE jar can be a joy to every member of the family except the person who is expected to keep its stock replenished, unless she keeps on file a few easily prepared and inexpensive cookie recipes. Rich cookies are usually expensive, for they contain a generous supply of butter and sugar and eggs, and are not the type of sweet for the cookie jar—especially when every member of the household is permitted to help himself at will.

There are, however, numerous other cookie recipes that are just as satisfying, though less rich, and these are certainly more considerate of the kitchen budget.

The following recipe for Cape Cod Molasses Cookies, for example, embodies all the desirable qualities of a cookie that should find its way into a cookie jar. It demands no rolling or cutting of cookie dough before baking and can therefore be prepared as quickly as the dough can be mixed. It is not a rich cookie so it is not expensive, and it contains just a bit of bran which gives it a nut-like flavor without the richness or expense nuts would entail. The bran also adds desirable bulk, an important dietary feature in which most cookies are lacking. The triple tested recipe follows:

Cape Cod Molasses Cookies

1/2 cup shortening	1/4 teaspoon soda
1/2 cup sugar	1 teaspoon baking powder
1 egg	1/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 cup milk	1/2 teaspoon nutmeg
1/4 cup molasses	1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
1/2 cup all-bran	1/4 teaspoon cloves
1 1/2 cups flour

Cream shortening and sugar thoroughly. Add egg; beat until creamy. Add milk, molasses and all-bran. Add flour which has been sifted with soda, baking powder, salt, nutmeg, cinnamon and cloves and mix well. Spread batter very thin in greased large jelly roll pan with heavy wax paper in the bottom. Bake in slow oven (300°F.) about 25 minutes. Cut diagonally into diamond shapes as soon as cookies are removed from oven. Let cool slightly before removing from pan.

Yield: 4 dozen cookies (1 1/4 x 1 1/2 inches).

LOVE AND A BET.

By Sarah Mizelle Morgan.

The four "Jays", as they termed themselves because each of their names began with "J", dined some-where together once a month to cele-brate their unbroken association since high school days. On these oc-asions any personal problem was brushed out. Tonight it was Janice who spoke.

"By the way, June, you reporters seem to know everything, suppose you solve this for me. I need money, how much money in a hurry. How would you suggest I get it? And don't tell me to go out and rob a bank just so you can get a front page story for that rotten sheet of paper."

Allen, slender, auburn-haired reporter for the Times, with blue eyes just dreamy enough, and a smile just captivating enough to entice Janice, carefully flicked the ashes from a cigarette and laughed. "You want money, lots of money in a hurry, you don't want to go to a bank. And, of course being in a hurry, you wouldn't have time to make a bet. Let's see what you can do. Well, darling, why not marry me?"

"That's just about what I expect- ed from you, June. Don't you ever have a serious thought?" Janice asked.

"But I am serious," June laughed. "Why not, Jan? You have charm, personality, and the looks." "Don't kid, June," Janice replied. "Such a thing would be im-possible even if I wanted to do it. You know girls of our position would- n't have a chance with men of Park Avenue. Besides, when I marry, it will be for love."

June tossed aside her cigarette. "That's where you are wrong, Jan. All men are vulnerable as far as wo- men are concerned. Riches don't make them immune. I'll bet you fifty dollars I can marry the richest man in New York within six months."

For a moment Janice stared at June amazed.

"And what makes you so sure you can do it?"

June flashed that smile which was the envy of her pals. "All in the technique you use, old dear. A wo- man can get any man she wants, if she wants him bad enough. In fact, that's just what I intend to do. I am tired of this struggling along on fif-ty per week."

Janice interrupted. "June, you don't mean you would marry a man just for his money?"

"Why sure," June laughed. "Mar-riage for love is passe. You can't live on love, or pay bills with it. It's evening gowns, fur coats, dia-monds, summers in Europe and win- ters in Florida that I love."

"One of these days, June, your ideas are going to turn on you. Then they do, I want to be around to see the fun," Jeannette ventured. She had nicknamed her the Judge because she was so dignified and re- served.

"Thanks, Judge," June replied smiling. When they'd all haled them- selves to court and you can pass sentence on them. Anyway, my bet still goes. Do you want to call it, Jan?"

"Indeed I do!" Janice answered emphatically. "If I could call a few such fool bets, I would soon have all the money I needed."

"I wouldn't be too sure, darling," June countered.

"How about you two?" Janice in-quired of Jocile and Jeannette.

"Count me in," Jocile said.

"Me too," answered Jeannette.

June smiled and lit another cig-arette. "OK, Judge. You hold the bet. Here is my fifty. Really this, I hate to take money from you like this. Too much like robbing the bank."

"Just wait until you get it, then attend your sympathy," Janice tapped.

"Well, so long girls. I have to go for Memphis at midnight. The bus is sending me on one of those vacation tours for two weeks. You know one of those Carter Tours you've advertised. He wants to know that, why and how, and if John pub-lishes one hundred fifty-nine dol- lars and fifty cents worth out of it."

"And when does the chase begin?"

"On the right now," June laughed. "You don't think you will meet the richest man in New York on this tour?"

"No," Jocile quipped.

"Who knows," June smiled. "Any- way the bet is in force right now. I still have five months and two weeks after I get back to New York."

"Well, goodbye, and the worst of luck to you," Janice called after her.

It was the morning out of Mem-phis. In the diner, June was waiting for her coffee, with the morning pa- per spread out on the table.

"I beg your pardon, do you mind if I sit down?" A pleasant voice in-terrupted. "This table has been re- served for me too. And the God of luck has really smiled on me."

June looked up into a smiling face, blue eyes with an impudent, come- other look. He stood waiting for her answer.

answered coolly. "But you should," he went on, smiling. "Especially in this case. All meals are included in the price of the tour you know. It would be a shame to pay for it and then not eat it."

June was about to reply that the tour wasn't costing her anything, but the steward appeared with his cof-fee.

"Oh steward," he said, looking straight at June. "The young lady has changed her mind. Bring her bacon, buttered toast with marmalade, grapefruit and more coffee. I'll have grapefruit, ham and eggs, buttered toast and more coffee."

The steward departed with a ques- tioning look at June.

June was beginning to boil inside, a reporter, June was used to the bold-ness of men, but this stranger taking so much authority—well, she wasn't used to men taking such per-sonal liberties with her. She resented it.

"It seems," he continued, "That we are to be table partners for this entire tour. I see no reason why we should not become acquainted. After all, vacations seldom turn out per-fect from every standpoint."

"But I'm not on a vacation," June snapped, making a mental note of at least one suggestion to the manage-ment as to how they might improve their tours.

"Well," he chuckled, "anyway, its detrimental to digestion to be upset at meal time. And since all our meals will be served in the diner un- less stopovers allow sufficient time for meals elsewhere, we might as well make the best of it. It isn't of-ten I have the pleasure of sitting across the table from someone as lovely as you are."

Despite the fact that she was furious, June's heart missed a beat at the compliment. Against her will she smiled.

"There! that's better," he grinned. "I like you better smiling. Now let me introduce myself. My name is Larry Conley, 29 years old, that is, I will be in two weeks. Employed at present by Van Alstyne refineries. On this tour because I can't tour Europe on two hundred a month. After this tour, I am going to New York to manage a business."

So he is going to New York, June thought. Well, there are enough ables in New York that I won't have to be bothered with him.

"Sure you haven't left out any-thing?" June inquired sarcastically. "At least he was unusually frank, she decided."

Not wanting to create a scene in the diner, June decided to make the best of the situation until she could gracefully leave. Then she would show this fresh stranger she was no pick-up. She would see the man in charge and arrange for another table.

"Shall we eat?" June asked, as their orders were placed before them. She would ignore the intro-duction, perhaps that would cool him off a little.

"Certainly, Miss Allen—June Al- len, special representative of the Times, I hope you like your break- fast," he replied, lifting his sparkling eyes to June's.

"So, you know all the answers, don't you?" June flared.

"Well, I was able to find out that much," Larry grinned.

By the time June had finished her breakfast to the last crumb of toast, and drained the cup for the last drop of coffee, her fury had dropped sev-eral degrees. Strange, but despite the circumstances, she had thorough-ly enjoyed that breakfast.

"And now, Mr. Conley, with your permission, I should like to get at some work which is urgently calling me," June said laughily.

"On one condition," he countered. "That you see the sights with me. Our first stopover is Dallas."

June merely shrugged her should-ers, gave him a withering look and left the diner without replying.

June had barely seated herself in the theatre, when she heard a fami- liar voice saying:

"I beg your pardon, do you mind if I sit down?"

Once more June looked up into the smiling face of Larry Conley.

"Oh, it's you again!" June cried angrily.

"Sure," he laughed.

"Mr. Conley," June said indig- nantly, "your behavior is becoming most impossible. The fact that we have to share the same table, does not give you the right to cut in on the rest of my activities. I came here to see and enjoy this show, not to be annoyed by you."

"Certainly, so did I," he said, his brown eyes twinkling merrily. "But I knew I would enjoy it doubly af- ter I found out you would be here."

"And how did you know I would be here?" June asked curiously.

"Oh, that's easy," he replied. "This theatre is one of the drawing cards, especially for Shakespeare lovers."

"And just how did you reach the conclusion that I am a Shakespeare lover?" June asked, a bit surprised.

"That's easy, too," he laughed. "I have always loved Shakespeare, and I saw you reading him. One doesn't read his works for pastime, and, since I'm sure he isn't required in connection with your special purpose on this trip, well . . . naturally . . . what other conclusion could I reach?"

June couldn't help smiling. Clever as well as handsome, she thought.

"Well," she said humorously, "I'll bet Scotland Yard could use a bright young man like you."

His reply was prevented as the curtain went up on Romeo and Juliet.

June became so absorbed in what to her was the author's masterpiece, that she was wholly unconscious of Larry's presence until Romeo spoke: "It is, enough I may but call her mine."

smiling and his eyes had lost some of their impudence for a more serious look. Larry left June at the pullman door with a courteous "Good night, Miss Allen, I hope you enjoyed the show."

The next morning June awoke to find her resentment of Larry and his conduct had somewhat diminished. She resolved at least to be civil to him although she didn't see why she should. Still, no harm could possibly come of a two weeks' friendly associ-ation.

The next stopover was at Juarez, that charming city in old Mexico. June had never been in Mexico, but had always wanted to go there. And now here she was in a quaint little place with Larry across the table.

The place was full of beautiful senoritas in native costumes dancing to the rhythmic strains of music that made your feet uncontrollable. June was a prisoner in the spell of ro- mance and beauty that permeated the place.

After the wild game dinner which was a part of their schedule, June and Larry strolled down the pictur- esque streets and through quaint, in-teresting little shops. June was gloriously lost in the beauty all around her. She couldn't help re- sponding to the romance that filled the very air. Once when Larry's hand accidentally touched hers when they reached for the same piece of pottery, June tingled all over.

That night, June tossed restlessly in her berth. She couldn't go to sleep and wondered what could be the matter with her. Finally, after smoking a half dozen cigarettes, which didn't taste at all like they usually did, and counting more sheep than she thought could possibly be in the world, each one with impudent brown eyes and a smiling face, June fell asleep to dream of Larry.

Three days and nights in Los An- geles, and Larry and June missed nothing of interest. They even man- aged to get inside a studio and watch the taking of a scene. Then they went for a drive through beautiful Beverly Hills, their guide calling out each star's home.

"Now that," June laughingly said to Larry, "is my idea of a way to live. You know, Mr. Conley, I am a very mercenary young woman. I want wealth and all it can give. Some day I am going to marry a rich man."

For a moment Larry looked at June as if trying to determine the true significance of her remark.

"And does love figure in the deal?" he asked seriously.

"Oh that," June replied lightly, "that is of the least importance."

But somehow her heart balked at backing up her words.

"Well, I hope your dreams come true," Larry answered quietly.

That night they decided to join some of the others who were going to Catalina Islands to dance. June loved dancing. She was glad she had brought an evening dress just in case. It was a fluffy, sky-blue chif- fon which vied with the azure of her eyes.

As they entered the taxi, Larry handed June a box.

"Orchids! How beautiful!" June ex- claimed rapturously.

"Thank you, Mr. Conley, I adore orchids. But aren't you being ter- ribly extravagant? And on two hun- dred a month?" June laughed.

"Oh, don't worry," he answered lightly. "I'm not always so reckless. Anyway, one only gets a vacation once a year you know."

What a marvelous dancer, June thought, as they glided smoothly along to the strains of a waltz.

"Did you know you are a swell dancer?" Larry asked smiling, as June looked up at him.

"You're not so bad yourself," June added sincerely. "You dance better than anyone I have ever danced with."

"Thanks," he laughed.

At an encore, the orchestra began: "I'm Falling in Love With Someone," the young leader, a handsome brun- net, singing the vocal.

June felt Larry's arm tighten slightly about her. She glanced up and their eyes met. What she saw there gave her a thrill she had never felt before with any man.

"June, you are so lovely tonight," Larry whispered tenderly.

Something welling up inside wouldn't let her answer so she just smiled. She liked being here in his arms like this. Maybe, after all, love was not what she had it figured out to be. Maybe Jan was right. If this was a tinge of love, she liked it.

When they returned to the pull- man Larry said softly: "Good night, June." Then, suddenly, he took her in his arms. His lips crushed hers in a kiss that left her limp and breath- less. Without a word he released her and was gone.

June had been kissed before, but never like that. Until the wee hours of the morning she was under the spell of that kiss, the thrill it had given her. She hoped he wouldn't do it again. She wouldn't be able to resist kisses like that. And yet, she knew she did want him to kiss her again.

Next morning at breakfast, neither of them referred to the in- cident of the night before. They talked of other things. Larry was cour- teous and smiled, but he seemed to have lost entirely the flippant mood of their previous encounters. June no- ticed little lines around Larry's mouth and eyes. He looked tired as if he hadn't slept.

"Well, our tour is rapidly coming to an end," Larry said soberly. "One more stopover and then back to our starting point."

"You're right. I hadn't thought of that," June replied quietly.

June began to think, to review the days which had been so thoroughly enjoyed. It had been, she decided, the most glorious two weeks she had ever known. Suddenly she knew she didn't want it to end because there wouldn't be any Larry. Their asso- ciation would end with the tour. June chided herself. Why am I tak- ing this thing so seriously? I—who am going to marry a rich man. Why this is just a summer romance. De- spite her resistance, June's heart kept saying: "But it can't end with this tour."

Their next stopover was at Seattle, with a boat trip to Vancouver, allow- ing one afternoon and night at beau- tiful Lake Louise.

In the afternoon Larry and June joined the others in a swim, return- ing to the club house which overlook- ed the lake, for dinner. Later, she and Larry went for a stroll. A full moon was just making its debut, and June wanted to see Lake Louise in the moonlight. It was so still June could almost hear the beating of her own heart. No sound disturbed the stillness except the soft lapping of the waves against the shore, and the occasional rustling of leaves in the breeze. Together, June and Larry watched the moon rise until the lake was like a vast silvered mirror re- flecting the gorgeous moon and the star-studded sky.

"How beautiful!" June murmured. "I could stay here forever."

"Yes, so could I," Larry answered quietly. "But in three days, it will all be over . . . G'ne like a dream with the dawn."

Then, June knew. Knew it was true, she wanted more than she had ever wanted anything in her life, to belong to this man; to be in his arms, to have his lips crush hers. Like a raging flame beyond control it swept over her. A lump in her throat kept her from speaking. She was trem- bling, unable to prevent it.

"Still," Larry went on huskily, "I suppose all things, even the beautiful must end sometime."

"We had better be getting back to the lodge," he said suddenly, taking her arm.

"Why, June!" he cried in alarm. "What's wrong! You're trembling."

June lifted her tear-filled eyes to Larry's. For a moment they stood in silence. Then she was in his arms. His lips tender, hungry, found hers.

"Oh my darling!" he whispered passionately. "You do love me. June, sweetheart, will you marry me? I have loved you since the mo- ment I first saw you. But I didn't dare tell you because I didn't think I had a chance, and I couldn't have stood a no from you."

June's answer was lost in the ec- stasy of another kiss. Then Larry released her.

"But you were going to marry a rich man," he teased. "And I'm not a rich man, that is, well . . . not yet."

"Oh, Larry darling," June laugh- ed. "You mean more to me than all the riches in the world. I would trade them all for one kiss from you."

"That's all I want to know, my sweet," Larry said tenderly, gather- ing her into his arms. "We will be married on my birthday. I will be twenty-nine, you know, the day we get back to Memphis. We will re- turn from there to New York togeth- er."

"Three days is a long time, dar- ling," June whispered happily.

She would have to write Jan, June thought; and forfeit her bet. Jan had been right after all. And the Judge . . . what a laugh she would get. Anyway, whatever she had to forfeit, Larry was worth it and more.

"Dear Jan," she wrote.

"You win. I am forfeiting my fifty on the bet. By the time this reaches you, I will be married to the only man in the world. And for love, on fifty per week. Wish me luck."

Love, June.

"Serves her right," Janice laugh- ingly said to Jocile and Jeannette. "For making such a fool bet. Still, I feel mean to take the money. What do you say we give it back to her for a wedding gift?"

"That's a swell idea," Jocile re- plied eagerly.

"Well . . ." drawled the Judge, "it might be well to review the evidence before you render any verdict." Jeannette unfolded the evening pa- per. On the front page in glaring headlines they read:

YOUNG MILLIONAIRE WEDS TIMES REPORTER

"Larry Conley of Memphis, and June Allen, Times reporter, were mar- ried in Memphis today. Young Conley is sole heir to the Van Al- styne oil millions, which makes him the wealthiest man in New York. Un- der the terms of his uncle's will, Con- ley came into possession of the es- tate on his twenty-ninth birthday, which was also his wedding day. He has been serving an apprenticeship since graduating from college eight years ago, in accordance with a fur- ther stipulation in the will, which re- quired him to start at the bottom in one of the Van Alstyne refineries, at a salary in keeping with that of oth- er employees, and live within that in- come, advancing strictly on merit. Conley is enroute to New York to take over his inheritance."

"Well!" Janice cried excitedly. "Can you beat that?"

"I'd be tickled to death to equal it," Jocile giggled.

"Suppose we send her a telegram of congratulations," Jeannette sug- gested.

"What shall we say?" Janice asked.

"Only one thing to say," Jeannette laughed

Larry and June had just finished breakfast on the diner enroute to New York, when the porter handed June a telegram.

"Wonder what's so important?" June said, opening the yellow sheet. It read:

"We are us, but congratulations, darling, your technique is perfect. You just married the richest man in New York. Best of luck to you."

The Three Jays.

"Larry! Is this true? Why didn't you tell me?" June cried excitedly, handing him the message.

Larry read it and laughed. June had never seen so much impudence in those brown eyes before.

"Oh that!" . . . Larry said lightly, "that is of the least importance. Right now—I'd be the richest man in the world, with one kiss from you."

EXTRA CASH

The general merchant, who did a bit of tailoring in his spare time, was called on by a friend, who said, "I've been putting on weight and this dress suit is rather too tight for me. Could you manage to let it out a bit?"

"I've never done such a thing," was the reply, "but I'll see what I can do."

A week later the owner of the suit telephoned to see how his friend was getting on with it.

"Better than I expected," said the friend, "I've let it out to four men already."—Edinburgh Dispatch.

D'HANIS, TEXAS, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 4, 1938

Mr. and Mrs. Matt M. Koch are the parents of an infant son born Sunday, October 2, 1938.

Judge and Mrs. A. H. Rothe are leaving Thursday for New Braunfels where they will be guests at the three-day meeting of the County Judges and County Commissioners Association of Texas.

Mrs. Christine Rudinger left last week for McCombs, where she is the guest of her daughter, Mrs. Fred Steinman.

Mrs. Herman Ney and children and Miss Tina Rothe visited Mrs. Allen Koch in San Antonio Saturday.

4-H Girls Study Play Equipment

"If we make play equipment that our families will enjoy, they will want to stay home instead of going to public amusements," said Miss Nell Foley, County Home Demonstration Agent, at the D'Hanis 4-H Club meeting on October 3rd at the high school auditorium.

A demonstration was given on making play equipment for the home by Miss Foley. After the demonstration the girls were allowed to play the different games.

During the business meeting Miss Foley explained the trip to the Dallas Fair for the three girls from the county who write the best histories of their club work.

F. F. A. ADOPT CONSTITUTION

From THE OWL

At a F. F. A. meeting last Wednesday night, September 28, a very much needed local constitution was presented to the Chapter by the Executive Committee, and after some discussion and a few changes it was accepted. Since the Chapter intends to enter the Lone Star Chapter Contest this year, the Lone Star Chapter Program of Work was accepted which is to be followed during the year. Also the objectives for the year, which were presented to the Chapter by the Objective Committee, were accepted at this meeting. The date of the annual Father-Mother-Son Banquet was set for May 5, 1939. Walter Bendele resigned from his office of Reporter for the Chapter because of a lack of time to give this office his full benefit. Roland Nester then received the responsibilities of Reporter.

The Honorary members of the F. F. A. for the year, July 1, 1938, to July 1, 1939, were elected. They include: The School Board, Members, Male School Teachers of Hondo High, J. D. Lacy, W. J. Nester, Clyde L. Lacy, E. J. Leinweber, C. M. Merritt, and H. A. Schweers.

Eleven boys were initiated to the degree of Greenhand. The successful candidates are: Lee Dell Williams,

Vice President—Calvin Bendele. Secretary—Jonelle Nester. Treasurer—Homer Nester. Reporter—Gertrude Weynand. Historian—Albert Britz. Sponsor—Mrs. Herman Couser.

Choral Club Makes Plans

Members of the D'Hanis High School Choral Club held a business meeting Wednesday, October 5, when they formulated plans for musical activities in the school. The director, Miss Josie Rothe, presided at the meeting. By-laws were adopted, and the following officers were elected: president, Ruth Strawn; first vice president, Mamie Del Rieber; second vice president, Inez Huegele; secretary, Gertrude Weynand; treasurer, Melverda Poerner; and reporter, Kathryn Holiday.

Besides continuing their work in choral singing, the members will make a study of different types of music as well as composers. The topic for study will be introduced at the first meeting of each month, while the second meeting will be of a more social nature, including a program by the club and, when possible, by guest musicians. During October the group will make a study of folk music of America and several European countries. The plan is designed for the purpose of promoting deeper appreciation and enjoyment of good music.

Assembly Program

The second assembly of the pupils of D'Hanis High School was held in the auditorium last Friday afternoon with Ruth Strawn, assembly leader, in charge. The meeting was in the form of a pep rally, as it immediately preceded the first football game of the Cowboys on their home field. The program was opened with the school song, "For You, D'Hanis". Following several songs by the pep squad Mr. Smith, athletic coach of the school, gave a history and explanation of six-man football. Homer Nester, captain of the team, voiced his appreciation of the support the boys had received. Superintendent Couser, in a timely pep talk, spoke of the necessity of good sportsmanship. After several yells by the pep squad, the meeting came to a conclusion.

The Pep Squad Performs

Wearing their new uniforms of purple and gold suspender dresses, the members of the pep squad gave their first performances at D'Hanis during the game between the Cowboys and the visiting Asherton team. Directed by their cheer leader, Inez Huegele, and accompanied by their little mascot, Charles Martin in cowboy clothes, the girls marched across the field between halves to form the letters A. H. S. and D. H. S. for spectators along both sidelines. The pep squad also sponsored the sale of cold drinks during the game.

Business Houses Closes for Game.

At a meeting of the Chamber of Commerce a decision was made to close the business houses of D'Hanis last Friday afternoon in order to give everyone an opportunity to see the first conference football game played by the D'Hanis team. A fair crowd attended the game. The Cowboys were defeated, and will meet the Catarina six on the D'Hanis grounds on October 7.

Jack Fuos, Douglas Fuos, Robert Cosgrove, Nathaniel Burnett, Lacy Claude Gilliam, Guido Schweers, Glen Coffey, Melvin Wendland, Ted Elliot, and Clinton Britsch.

In order to become a Greenhand the boy must be enrolled in Vocational Agriculture, have a satisfactory program of work, recite the Creed from memory, receive at least two-thirds approval of the members present, and go through the initiation ceremony.

H. E. CLUB RE-ORGANIZED FOR CURRENT YEAR

Holding their initial meeting, the Home Economics Club members, under the direction of Miss Martin, H. E. teacher of Hondo High School, organized for this school year.

During the meeting, at which Sue Muennink, club president, presided, members decided to hold the initiation for the Freshmen and new club members, on Tuesday, October 11. Dues of ten cents per month, excluding an initiation fee of ten cents, will be paid by all in the organization.

It was also decided by unanimous vote of those assembled that the program committee decide upon its own program theme for each meeting instead of letting the club, as a whole, make this decision.

The following are the committees that were appointed:

Program Committee:

Jo Dawson, chairman

Judy Lacy

Frances Bendele

Entertainment Committee:

Elizabeth Reynolds, chairman

Mary Elizabeth Meyer

Margaret Ann Knopp

Laura Lee Leinweber

Finance Committee:
